Handwritten text in Khmer script on a palm leaf manuscript. The text is arranged in approximately 10 horizontal lines. The script is dense and characteristic of traditional Khmer writing. The leaf shows signs of age, including two circular holes and some staining.

Handwritten text in Khmer script, likely a historical document or manuscript. The text is arranged in approximately 10 horizontal lines across the width of the page. The script is dense and characteristic of traditional Khmer writing. Two circular holes are visible on the right side of the page, suggesting it was part of a bound volume or a scroll.

Handwritten Burmese script on a palm leaf manuscript strip. The text is arranged in four horizontal lines. The script is a traditional form of Burmese, likely used for religious or historical records. The characters are finely etched into the surface of the dried leaf. The strip has two circular holes, one on the left and one on the right, which were used for threading a cord to bind multiple leaves together into a book format. The text appears to be a continuous passage, possibly a prayer or a historical account, given the context of such manuscripts.
